Teng criticizes U.S. Iran policy

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, fresh from a tour of America, told Japanese leaders Wednesday the United States showed a lack of direction on Iran and mishandled the crisis there, a spokesman said.

Teng told former Premier Takeo Fukuda that the United States was in indecision and that "the United States' handling of the crisis lacks direction," Fukuda's secretary Yoshiro told reporters.

Teng stopped in Japan for two days after his city tour of the United States. He had on the former premier because Fukuda was in office when the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty was signed last year. The Chinese official told Fukuda he thought the Russians were already in Iran and that they would surely become a destabilizing influence on the area, Mori said.

Iran has been embroiled in more than a year of political turmoil directed against the authoritarian rule of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was forced to leave the strategic oil-rich nation last month.

The secretary quoted Teng as saying the United States "is allowing the Soviet Union to place a lot of pawns on the world's chessboard" and "things cannot be allowed to go on this way."

Teng called for a withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea, but also urged Washington to check Soviet expansionism in other parts of the world, Mori said.

"Should the U.S. troops leave South Korea, they will still be near by, so it will not affect the stability of the region ... But it would be better for both Taiwan and South Korea if the troops were withdrawn," Teng was quoted as saying.

Teng also criticized Vietnam and Cuba, saying that the United States cannot simply allow Cuba to increase its influence in Africa.

The Chinese vice premier told Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira that some restraint must be exercised over the activities of Vietnam.

After the Japanese media described Teng as having called for the punishment of Vietnam, Ohira told opposition parliamentarians, "I don't think he had military action in mind."

A new Cambodian leadership came to power in the wake of a Vietnamese-backed invasion of the country last month, and China claims that the Soviet Union was behind Vietnam's action. The Chinese sought recourse in the United Nations Security Council, but the Soviet Union vetoed the resolution.

Teng arrived in Japan Tuesday on his way home from the United States. His visit underlines the existence of what advisers to Ohira call "the triangular relationship" between Japan, China and United States — though they add that this is not directed against the Soviet Union.

Japan's relationship with the Soviet Union have touched a low after a Japanese government announcement that the Russians have reinforced their garrison on two islands off the northern Japanese island of Hokkaido.

Khomeini forces rather strength

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Backers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini were in control of several city governments Wednesday on the eve of demonstrations intended to drive the religious leader's claim to the throne of this troubled nation.

Washington, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told the Senate Energy Committee the Iranian crisis should leave American oil inventories Khomeini aide Ibrahim Yazdi said the provisional government will try to operate with civil servants loyal to Khomeini. The provisional government is to arrange a referendum on a constitution that would make Iran an Islamic republic.

Cities where administrative and some police functions now are run by Khomeini backers included Isfahan, Qom, Shiraz and others, especially in southern Iran, reports from those cities said.

In the western city of Sanandaj, an armed group attacked a television station Tuesday night, killing a guard and destroying cars in the parking lot, state radio said.

Wednesday, 8,000 supporters of Bakhtiar's shah-appointed government gathered at a Teheran sports stadium to give him backing.

The rally was attended mainly by middle- and upper-class Iranians, and was punctuated by slogans backing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was forced to leave Iran Jan. 16 by the Khomeini-led masses opposed to his rule.

Men and women with tears in their eyes chanted "Long live the shah" and knelt in homage to the monarch. Said one woman: "I love my king and if I had a little blood in my body I would give it for my king."

dangerously low" next winter and controls, but he said he does not anticipate gasoline rationing.

Iran sold about 900,000 barrels of oil a day to the United States before the hobbled production last fall.

Iranian engineer Mehdi Bazargan, named by Khomeini to form a provisional government, announced he outlined his program and possibly he ministers on Friday.

Khomeini's rival government to the shah-appointed administration of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar got port from striking civil servants in Justice Ministry and in Bakhtiar's office and from the staff of the official Pars news agency Wednesday.

Gasoline stations

Sunday closure considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is considering forcing gasoline stations to close on Sunday as part of a program to reduce oil consumption and build public awareness of the energy crisis prompted by instability in Iran.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told the Senate Energy Committee Wednesday the administration still hopes voluntary measures will be enough, but a package of mandatory controls is being studied.

He ruled out the possibility that gasoline rationing would be part of a mandatory conservation program.

Saying he has seen no indication "that the slide of Iran toward chaos has been arrested," Schlesinger said the cutoff of oil from that Mideast country is forcing the United States to draw on reserves to make up part of the 900,000 barrels a day once imported from Iran.

"Unless we are able to restock for next winter, our inventories could be dangerously low," he said.

The secretary said oil consumption could be reduced by more effective use of new supplies of natural gas, elimination of unnecessary driving and adherence to the 55-miles-per-hour speed limit.

Beyond that, he said several mandatory measures are being considered.

"We do not know the extent to which we would need to turn to mandatory measures if, indeed, they are required," said Schlesinger.

He said the administration is drawing up a plan now and "by April 1, we should have firmly in mind, within this government, what we are prepared to do."

"I think the Sunday closing may be a necessary part of the kind of package we may have to put together," he added.

In response to questioning by Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., Schlesinger acknowledged that Sunday closings, which the administration could order under existing law, would be a means of heightening public awareness of the need to conserve as much as a method of reducing gasoline consumption.

Other possibilities under consideration are:

—Setting limits on heating and cooling in public and commercial buildings.

—Limiting the number of parking places.

—Barring non-essential lighting such as advertising signs.

—Pressing for additional conversions from oil to coal in power plants and other industrial facilities.

Schlesinger said the nation now has a 70-day supply of oil in reserve. At the time of the 1973 Arab oil embargo, the normal reserve was 54 days, he said.

Asked when he would advise the president to declare a state of emergency, Schlesinger replied, "As we reached 60 days, one should get quite nervous."

Major storm grips East

NEW YORK (AP) — A major snowstorm socked the big cities of the industrial Northeast Wednesday, snarling rush-hour traffic, closing schools and disrupting air travel.

The storm, which blanketed much of Dixie and the mid-Atlantic states with up to 10 inches of snow, moved into the Northeast almost a year to the day after the disastrous Blizzard of '78 paralyzed much of the region.

On its way north, the storm dumped up to 10 inches of snow in Tennessee, 8 inches in some parts of Virginia, and similar accumulations in Maryland and Delaware.

An ice storm knocked out power in much of South Carolina and north Georgia.

Washington's National Airport was closed. Some 8 inches of snow was expected in downtown areas and 10 inches in the suburbs.

Law students

Their carrels are their castles

By TOM MILLER
Universe Staff Writer

Is it true that when students are accepted to the BYU law school, they enter the law building and are never heard of again?

This is almost true, considering that the average law student spends eight to 12 hours a day in the law building. Most of this time is spent in the law library.

Each of the four floors of the library is crowded with study carrels — tiny spaces allotted to each law student.

In the law library, a person's carrel is his castle. Each carrel is decorated according to the taste of its inhabitant, with everything from pictures of Bogart and Betty Ford to granola and gorilla posters.

One promising young lawyer-to-be displayed his feelings about law school with this poster: "Just when I knew all of life's answers, they changed all the questions." In an effort to explain his state of mind, another student hung this poster: "The management of this establishment is not responsible!"

The carrels range from almost no sign of life to those resembling a circus.

Gavin Anderson, a third year law student, sits in his carrel looking dapper in a three-piece pinstripe suit. He has hung out his sign and explained that the bean bag chair in the corner is strictly for clients.

Jack Haycock, a second year law student from Sacramento, Calif., explained the need to express oneself. "You need to decorate in order to live things up," he said. "After all, you don't get too many preference dates when you spend 12 hours a day in a carrel."

Single male students have a tendency to decorate their carrels more than other law students. Tawn Holtzman, a first year student from Huntington Beach, Calif., said she thought single guys decorate more than their female counterparts because "girls live at home and study in their carrels and the guys have a tendency to do everything except life's necessities in their carrels."

This could explain why toothpaste, shaving lotion, changes of clothing and combs and brushes are found in the single males' carrels. One carrel is equipped with a pet fish.

Each level of the library is known for something in particular. The first level is fondly called "the dungeon" or "the pit" because of the absence of windows. The second floor is noted for the leafless tomato plant growing in a corner carrel. The third floor's main feature is the football basketball court located against the back wall.

A person with a carrel on the fourth floor has to sign away all study privileges, according to one student. The floor has football and backgammon tournaments held in the "Gerald R. Dye Memorial Stadium," with the results published in a weekly newsletter.

A strange thing about this floor is that its inhabitants refused to give their names or allow their pictures to be taken.

Perhaps some opinions about law students are now changed and questions are answered about why they spend so much time at their carrels. No one could really study for 12 hours ... could he?

'It was our biannual wash day...'

A sign mysteriously appears on the Carillon bell tower which says, "We want our washers back." Dismayed residents of Callis Hall posted the sign Wednesday in an attempt to find out why their washroom had been locked since Monday.

Bruce Ashton, manager of Deseret Towers, and other housing officials, met with residents to explain the problem. Ashton said that over the weekend someone had pried off the coin boxes of four of the washing machines and had taken the boxes and an undetermined amount of money.

Glen Bair, maintenance supervisor for the self service laundries and vending machines, said the repairman was told to put out-of-order signs on the machines and to unplug them. Those particular parts are not normally kept in stock and had to be specially ordered.

Bentley Stevens, head resident of Callis Hall, when asked whether the washroom was closed to punish the students said "we are not punishing anyone." The washroom was locked up because the machines were turned off. She said the residents could use the washrooms in the other halls.

Dewey Conley, a freshman from Las Cruces, New Mexico, said "they were really good about it. Brother Ashton and those from housing came down and explained the problem to us."

Ransom to be paid in kidnap?

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Gianna Cattaneo, the mother of Italy's latest kidnap victim, demanded press silence Wednesday in the abduction of her daughter, indicating the family might be willing to ransom the victim after all.

It was a change of heart for the hot-tempered 64-year-old woman who was earlier quoted as saying she did not love her 46-year-old daughter Evelina and would not pay a single lire to get her released.

Evelina, a Swiss-educated divorcee, is something of a local eccentric who likes to keep wild animals in her luxury house. She is the 11th kidnapping victim in Italy this year.

Gunmen fire on bingo game

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The cafeteria at St. Louis Bertrand Parish school was crowded with elderly bingo players when four gunmen stalked into the room, announced a holdup and suddenly opened fire on the terrified group.

Panicked players scattered in all directions. When the shooting was over, one woman was dead and one man was wounded. The thugs fled empty-handed, leaving behind a scene of panic and death. A pair of eyeglasses, shattered by bullets, lay on a table.

Dorothy M. Taylor, 49, of Oakland, died of a gunshot wound in her back.

Angry farmers boo Bergland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jeered and booed by angry farmers, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland softly apologized Wednesday to anyone insulted by his suggestion that some farmers demonstrating for more government aid are "driven by just old-fashioned greed."

Bergland did not withdraw his remark, however, and he reiterated his opposition to increasing crop price supports and insisted that 1978 "in virtually every respect ... was a good year" for rural America.

'Over 55' states to lose funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any state raising the speed limit higher than 55 miles per hour will lose its federal highway funds, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Wednesday.

BROCK ADAMS

Adams said he has informed the governors of several states that "we will cut off highway funds to states that raise the speed limit past 55. That's without exception."

Legislators and governors in at least 14 states, including Utah, are discussing how to get around the 55 mph speed limit imposed on them by the federal government.

WEATHER

(AP) — The forecast for Utah calls for slowly moderating temperatures. Considerable clouds today and Friday with chance of snow at times along northern mountains. Lows mostly in the upper teens and 20s, Highs in the upper 30s and 40s but lows ranging down to near zero and highs in the 20s in some eastern valleys.

Total solar eclipse predicted in U.S.

The two Chinese astronomers who got drunk 4116 years ago and forgot to scare off the serpent swallowing the sun would get a kick out of Russ Cox's knockout cocktail, the "Total Eclipse."

They also might enjoy watching the sun go black on a champagne-sipping "Flight to Totality" high above the Columbia River gorge.

If the Chinese astronomers, named Hi and Ho, were still around, they could be at Cox's bar in Richland, Wash., on Feb. 26, when this country's final total eclipse of the century occurs.

Cox, manager of the Hanover House, invented the "Total Eclipse," a mixture of rum, gin, sloe gin and orange juice, for armchair astronomers who want to celebrate the first such eclipse visible in the United States since March 7, 1970.

Hi and Ho won't be there, of course, since their names appear in the earliest surviving written record of a total eclipse of the sun. It says they lost their heads to the royal executioner in 2137 B.C. for partaking of strong spirits and neglecting to bang drums and shoot arrows at the offending serpent, which the ancient Chinese blamed for an eclipse of the sun.

Americans have more scientific explanations for an eclipse, but some of their rituals seem almost as strange. Indeed, a kind of solar mania grips humankind when the moon blocks our view of the sun. Everybody wants a front-row seat, even if it means scores of people will permanently damage their eyesight, as 121 did in 1970, by looking directly at the sun.

Thousands are jockeying for a good position when the moon's shadow touches land first at 8:12 a.m. at Agate Beach, Ore., just west of Portland, then sweeps a path 180 miles wide up the Columbia River and across much of Oregon, Washington, northern Idaho and North Dakota into Canada. In other areas of the United States, it will be seen as only a partial eclipse, of varying degrees.

Field trip arranged to eclipse viewpoint

BYU's astronomy department is arranging a field trip to Montana or Washington for students interested in observing the last total solar eclipse of the century, said Irwin Bassett, director of the BYU planetarium.

"We will go on the trip in buses and private cars leaving early Feb. 24," Bassett said. "We will be there and observe the eclipse Monday morning and plan on being back in Provo late Monday night."

Students interested in the expedition may contact Bassett in his office, 191 ESC.

Cost of the trip will be $25-30, not including room and board. "We will be bringing a few tents for the students who want to suffer through the cold winter weather," Bassett said. Weather conditions will determine whether the group goes to Washington or Montana.

The eclipse will best be seen Feb. 26 in the northern third of Oregon and the southern third of Washington. "In Provo we won't be able to see a total solar eclipse," Bassett said. Provo will be favored with only a 91 percent eclipse of the sun.

The eclipse, which will begin shortly after 8 a.m., will reach maximum visibility in Provo at 9:15 a.m., said Bassett. At that time only a small crescent of the sun will be showing.

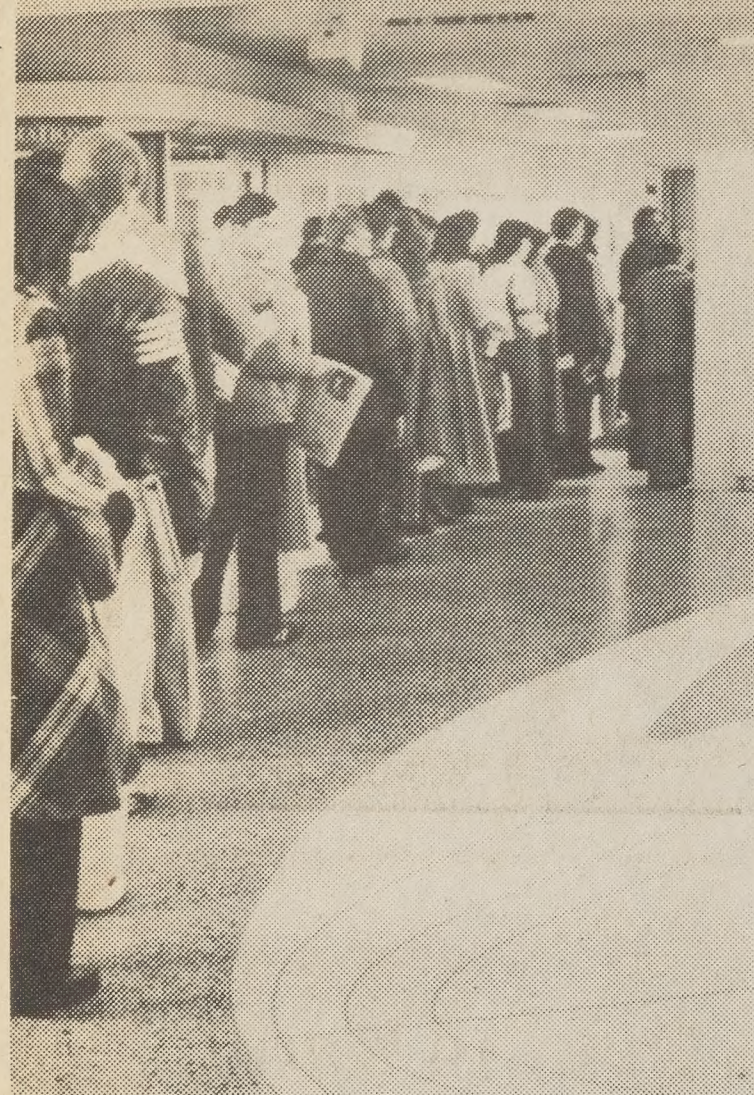

Bassett warns persons not to look directly at the sun without eye protection. The great intensity of the sun's light may damage your eyes permanently, he said.

University of Utah physics professor Dr. Donald E. Groom points out that sunglasses, smoked glasses and photographic film do not provide safe viewing.

For direct viewing, he says, a piece of No. 14 arc welder's glass provides a reliable shield to prevent burning of the retina, a painless but permanent damage which produces a blank spot in a person's field of vision.

The traditional pinhole device is a safe indirect viewing method. With this method, a pinhole about 1/16 inch in diameter should be made in a large piece of cardboard. The sun's image should be projected through this hole onto a sheet of white paper held about three to five feet away from the cardboard.

A lecture on the solar eclipse will be given Feb. 22 for students interested in the phenomenon.

Pornography bills introduced

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah lawmakers are considering two tough bills to keep girlie magazines away from minors and prevent sexual exploitation of children.

A bill was introduced Wednesday that would impose a mandatory $500 fine and a 30 day jail term on anyone who sold or showed movies, tapes, books, pamphlets or magazines containing descriptions or depictions of illicit sex, sexual immorality or sexually arousing pictures to anyone under 18.

Man arrested in murder deal

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake City police arrested a man Wednesday after he accepted $5,000 from an undercover vice officer posing as a criminal who wanted pornography prosecutor Stan Olson killed.

Vice Sgt. Dave Harkness said Richard Koehler, 48, was arrested and booked in the Salt Lake jail. No formal charges had been filed, Harkness said.

He said the investigation began after a police informant reported being approached by a man who was looking for someone to pay him for killing Olson. Olson has been prosecuting local theaters showing adult films.

Bulls, boars banned in bill

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A state senator critical of church — state ties in previous legislation introduced a bill Wednesday to ban the eating of meat on Friday and the sale of pork anytime.

Sen. Art Kimball, D-Salt Lake, a Catholic, called the bill "1921 Revisited," a reference to an identical bill filed in the 1921 Legislature.

Kimball said the bill was a protest of what he considers an infringement of the separation of church and state in other bills.

The wording of Kimball's bill describes it as "a companion bill to several others introduced of a similar nature during the 1979 general session of the Utah State Legislature."

Kimball had voted against a bill that would require school districts to inform teachers of their legal obligation to teach morals in the classroom. He called that measure "a gross violation of the separation of church and state."

Kimball's bill would make it a misdemeanor to eat meat in any "restaurant, cafe, cabaret, buffet or other public eating place or menage."

Any butcher who offers meat for sale if he knows the purchaser intends to eat it on Friday could be charged with a misdemeanor.

Kimball's bill lists a number of animals whose meat would be included under the ban, including any

"cow, heifer, bull, steer, calf, lamb, ewe, wether, buck, boar, sow, barrow, buffalo bull, buffalo calf or any wild or so-called game animal."

It would specifically exclude fish.

Another senator, Ken Pace, D-Roy, had drawn up a bill which would bring prohibition back to Utah, but didn't introduce it, saying he was afraid it would pass.

Teacher explains Iranian unrest

By KIM SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Extreme poverty and a lack of freedom of speech in government are two of the main reasons for unrest in Iran, according to a BYU professor.

Donna Lee Bowen, assistant professor in BYU's political science department, said the people of Iran are either extremely rich or extremely poor, and some of the rich are leaving the country, taking with them some $50 million a day.

Shah himself took approximately $400 million when he left the country, Ms. Bowen said.

BYU professor, who joined the faculty in the fall of 1978, said in Iran in the summer of 1970, and has since studied its politics and economy.

Money misused

It is appalling to see where the money is going in Iran," she said. "Hardly anything goes to the poor to help those in need."

Unrest began among these people, Ms. Bowen said, the "shut up with a gun" of yes men.

There was "no balance between the cries of the people and what the Shah could permit."

When people would speak out against the government they immediately were imprisoned, Ms. Bowen said. Some 300,000 prisoners are constantly being circulated through the prisons.

There were also "brutal methods of torture" which the Shah never admit to, she said. The treatment of those who spoke out was "shut up with a gun" of yes men.

Army loyal

The army has maintained its loyalty because its members have been consistently well paid," Ms. Bowen said. There is also a high morale among the Iranian troops.

When the Shah left the country he appointed Bakhtiar to "calm things down," but since that time the Ayatollah Khomeini made his triumphant return from exile and appointed Khomeini to head a revolutionary regime. The future of Khomeini will depend on the loyalty of the army and which side it takes, she said.

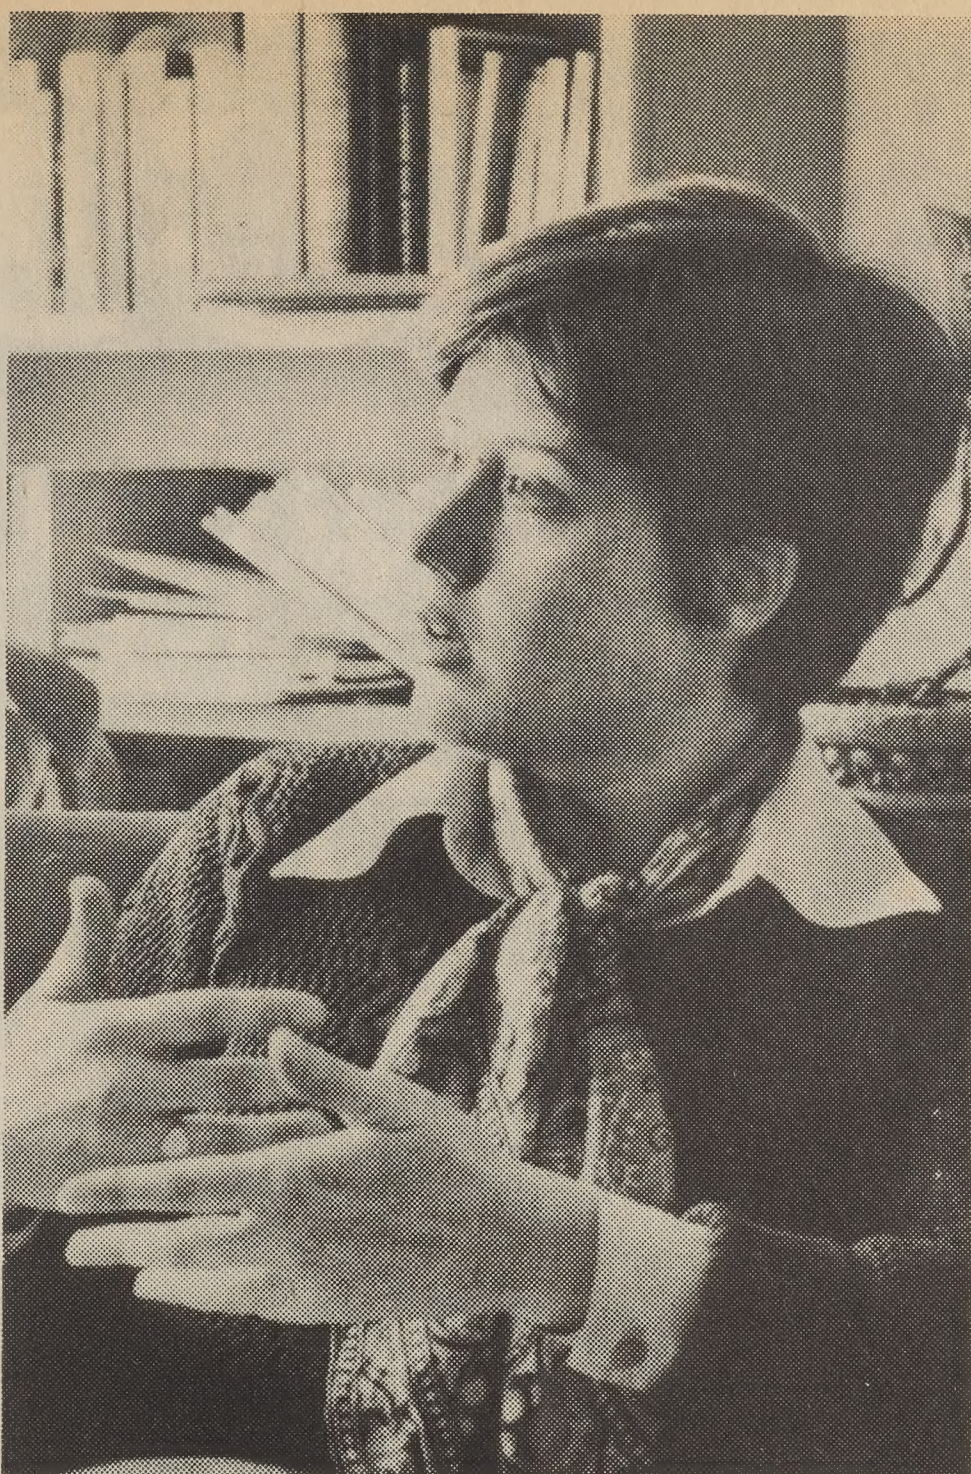

When discussing Khomeini and his attempts to improve the government, Ms. Bowen said, "He wants an Islamic government, and he has been careful to say what that means." She said there is no way of knowing what he will do next, but it will be in order to observe because he is a religious man and promotes a new way of life.

Persian professor

The situation was summed up by a Persian professor with whom Bowen became acquainted when he visited America. He recently sent her a letter which he titled, "New Year Greetings to the American People from the Oppressed and Beleaguered People of Iran."

On the one hand is determined to retain his Peacock and thus save Iran for the benefit of himself," the Persian professor said. "On the other hand, the people of Iran are determined to end oppression and tyranny in order to be the masters of their own destiny."

Bowen said she doesn't know how the professor got the letter, but she described him as being scholarly and a person who knows what he is talking about. He also spent 10 years studying in the U.S., she said.

Assistant professor Donna Lee Bowen discusses Iranian problems.

"Attempts to communicate some of these problems with the American representatives here is no less frustrating," the Persian professor said. "It is like knocking your head against a concrete wall."

Daily deaths

The professor is a faculty member at Shiraz University in Shiraz. In his letter he said, "Not a single day passes without hundreds of deaths throughout Iran. The unarmed nation is fighting with bare fists a sophisticated army of 400,000, armed and trained by America. The Shah's American-made helicopters do not hesitate to shoot on demonstrators."

"It is hoped that the consciousness of the Americans can be aroused sufficiently to put an end to the systematic suppression of human rights in Iran, which is presently done with the deliberate knowledge and support of the American government."

Concerning these struggles in Iran, Ms. Bowen said, "How long are they going to let this chaos go on? Nobody knows what the future holds for Iran. We will just have to wait to see what's going to happen."

New city jail has religion

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Jail inmates who turn to Christ in Roanoke won't have to wait — baptisms will be performed on the premises.

The jail under construction will include, to the surprise of officials, a baptismal tank.

Sheriff Alvin Hudson said he found out about the tank from a construction worker at the new jail. He said he didn't know who ordered the tank.

Y wrestler; walk on winner

By LISA JOHNSON
Assistant Sports Editor

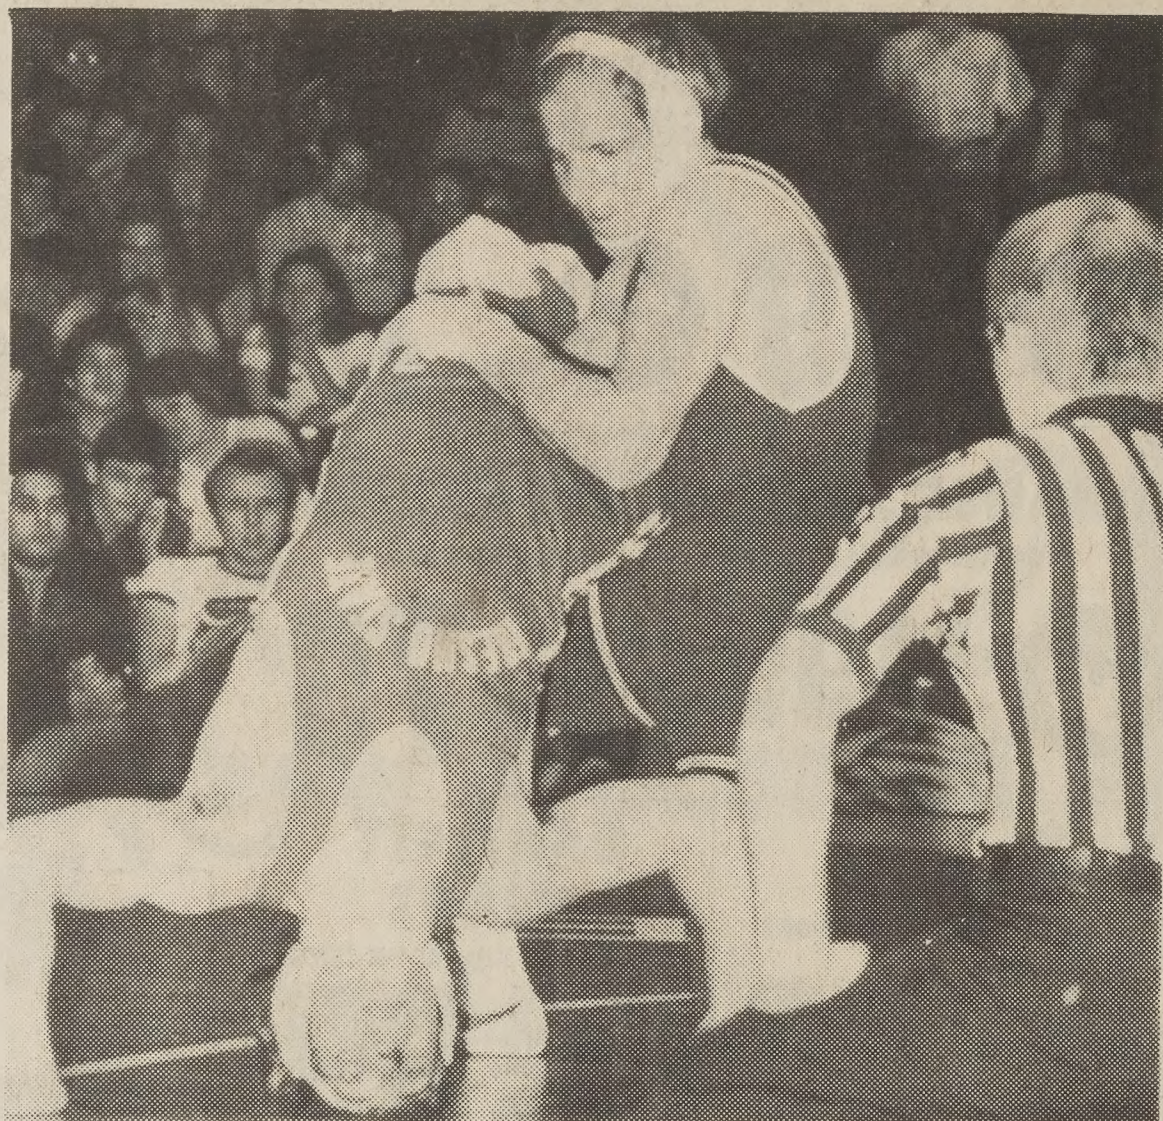

BYU coaches didn't expect much of the 124-pound freshman from North Dakota when he first stepped on the mat for tryouts. He was a two-time state champ, but that didn't mean much, since his home state was not renowned for wrestling. Even so, Coach Fred Davis gave him a locker and let him work with the team.

That 124-pound freshman made the Varsity squad in his first year, and now, Ed Maisey sports a 22-1 record. He is the top 134-pounder in the WAC and has jumped to a number three national ranking since his BYU beginning five years ago.

Now everyone knows that a college athlete has only four years of eligibility, so that means Maisey's college career must have been interrupted at one point. Maisey considers that two year interruption, during which he served on an LDS mission to Korea, to be one of the greatest helps of his wrestling career. "I matured physically and came back mentally tougher," he said.

Most athletes are forced to shelve their abilities for the duration of their missions, but Maisey was fortunate enough to be able to use his wrestling talent as a missionary tool. While working on the U.S. military base in Korea, Maisey coached a combination junior high-high school wrestling team and thus managed to keep the rust away. But the real boost to his ability came from another source.

Maisey was introduced to the Olympic gold medal wrestler, who happened to be a native Korean. Through this he was invited to work out with the Korean National team and he kept up with the best of them. "Wrestling with another country's best helped me a lot mentally," he said.

Maisey still carries that mental toughness to the mat with him today. For along with concentrating on being alert and giving his all the entire eight minutes of a match, he bolsters his confidence with the thought that he's wrestled with the best.

Maisey's concentration is not always on mat matters, however. Between matches, he has found time to excel in his zoology major enough to be accepted to dental school upon his April graduation.

Maisey says a career in dentistry won't put an end to his wrestling career. "Wrestling has become a part of me now, and I will be associated with it for the rest of my life," he said.

Continue wrestling

He took the sport up as a 70-pound seventh grader because it was the only sport his size allowed him to compete in, but Maisey has developed a real love for wrestling. He says he wants to continue with the sport, either through promotion or coaching.

Meanwhile, Maisey is working toward a possible national title. Last year he was downed in the quarter-finals at the national championships, and feels he has a chance to go all the way this year. "I'm looking for it — working for it," he said.

His "working for it" consists of about four hours of practice a day. This includes running two miles in the morning and practice with the team, not to mention coping with the plague of every wrestler, weight watching. Maisey does watch his weight, but having learned from bad experience with dieting, he controls his weight by "eating normal things — just cutting down."

Bird leads Sycamores to 21st straight win

They were saying some disparaging things about the Indiana State basketball team in the newspapers. You know, the usual... a weak schedule, and all that.

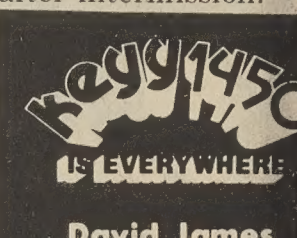

That made Larry Bird mad. "He was very emotional going into the game," Coach Bill Hodges said about the pre-game scene before Tuesday night's contest with Drake.

Although Hodges stressed that "I don't prefer our guys to be that way," it didn't seem to do Bird any harm. The leading man of the Sycamore cast scored 33 points to power the nations' second-ranked team to a 100-79 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Sycamores didn't really show their intensity until the second half, when they blew the game open behind their brilliant forward, who scored 20 of his points after intermission.

Clampett to compete

Y golfers to play in Mexico

By DAVE HEYLEN
Universe Sports Editor

The Cougar golf team will pull out their clubs to compete in a tournament for the first time in two months as BYU travels to Mexico to compete in the Pan American tournament.

The 54 hole tourney, to start today, will feature a field of 30 teams, including the top five finishers in last year's NCAA championship. Along with BYU, which finished fourth in the national championships, will be defending national champion Oklahoma State, No. 2 Georgia, No. 3 Arizona State and Wake Forest.

BYU, the defending champion of the tourney, will take two players from last year's squad. Along with Bobby Clampett, who finished second a year ago, will be senior Erich Gott.

Younger squad

This year, coach Karl Tucker will be taking a much younger squad with him. Rounding out the starting five for the tournament will be Dick Zokol, Ted Lehman and Dave DeSantis.

Although the team has been unable to play for the past two months because of adverse weather conditions, Tucker feels his players will perform well. "I think we're as ready as we can be," Tucker said. "The team is getting back into the swing of things." To prepare for the tourney the team has been practicing in the Smith Fieldhouse and studying their swings with the help of a videotape machine.

Pan American

The Pan American tourney will kick off the second half of the BYU season which started early in the fall. "We started off well, winning the Tucker tourney but let a few matches get away," Tucker said. Absent from the majority of fall tournaments was sophomore standout Clampett.

Clampett, who competed in national and international tourneys during the fall, will be a key factor, according to Tucker. "A lot of people will have their eyes on Bobby at the tournament," the Cougar mentor said. "This will be a good opportunity to show everyone exactly what we have." Tucker sees Clampett as the best thing they have going for them.

Last year BYU breezed to an easy 11 point win over Oklahoma State, paced by Clampett, who shot a three round total of 212 tie for second.

WAC contest on TV Friday

The BYU Cougars will meet the New Mexico Lobos for the second time this season at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Albuquerque, N. Mex.

The game will be carried live over KBYU-TV Channel 11.

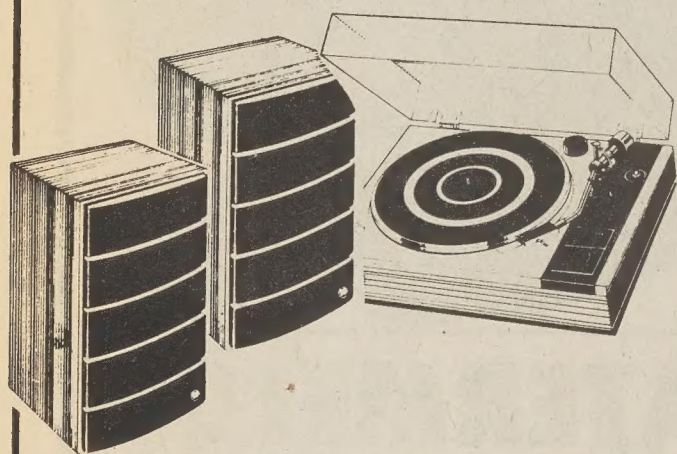

Jay Monson will do the play-by-play commentary and former Cougar football and basketball star, Gifford Nielson, will provide color commentary.

The Cougars go into the game as co-leaders in the WAC, posting a 5-1 conference record so far. They defeated the Lobos a month ago in Provo 100-83.

The Air Force needs pilots.

The Air Force is currently experiencing a pilot shortage. This deficiency is caused by the addition of several types of new aircraft in the inventory, combined with an above average attrition rate for pilots during the past several years. It is an excellent time to investigate the opportunities, challenges, and rewards of being an Air Force pilot. We also invite your investigation of the multitude of other career fields in the Air Force.

The Air Force ROTC detachment on campus has 19 Pilot Quotas available for BYU Students who will graduate between April and August 1981. Shortly after earning your Bachelor's degree, you will be commissioned a 2nd Lt. in the USAF and will enter undergraduate pilot training for one year. You will fly the supersonic T-38 Talon jet aircraft during your training.

Applicants must pass an Air Force physical examination, complete the Air Force Officer Qualifying Test, and be under 26 and 1/2 years of age at the time of graduation. All openings must be filled by 1 March 1979. Interested individuals should immediately contact the Air Force ROTC department in Room 380 Wells ROTC Building, ext. 2671.

Sideline Chatter

By CARL HAUPT
Assistant Sports Editor

The big name states; Indiana, California, New York, etc.

Everybody knows these are the cream of the crop when it comes to basketball . . . or are they?

I'm going to stick my neck out and add Utah to the list. Even though Utah is regarded as an obscure state by many basketball fans, it has a rich basketball tradition.

Just take last year's season as an example. Bill Foster, a former coach at the University of Utah, led the Duke Blue Devils to second place in the NCAA. The NBA title team, the Washington Bullets, was coached by Dick Motta, who used to coach at Weber State in Ogden.

Unique position

Even this year Utah basketball is in a unique position. What other state has four major universities and all four of them are either in first place in their league or tied for first?

Weber State is first in the Big Sky Conference and was ranked in the UPI Top Twenty last week. BYU and Utah are tied for the lead in the WAC, and Utah State is in first place in the PCAA.

Add the junior colleges, Snow and Southern Utah State, which are both leading their conferences, and you have near perfection in the league races among all the schools.

The University of Utah is the only team in U.S. basketball history to win all three collegiate basketball championships. The Utes have captured the titles of the NCAA, NIT and the AAU. BYU has won two NIT titles and has produced 13 All-Americans since 1950.

Even such normally conservative institutions as the BYU mathematics department have gotten behind the Cougars' basketball bandwagon this year. A cheer currently making the rounds of the TMCB goes like this:

e to the x, dy, dx.

e to the x, dx.

Secant, cosine, tangent, sine, three point one four one five nine, Go Cougars!

Basketball fever

Basketball fever seems to infect Utah kids right from the start. High school competition is every bit as exciting as collegiate action. Just ask BYU assistant coach Harry Anderson, who used to coach at Orem high school, about his games against Provo high school.

Provo's domination of the prep ranks in Utah began in 1973 while Anderson was still coaching high school ball. Provo and Orem high schools have produced many athletes for BYU. Orem's Jay Cheesman, now with the Utah Pros, and Provo's Gifford Nielsen, Verl Law and Vance Law all came to BYU. Throw in 7-0 Brett Vroman (who went to UCLA and then transferred to UNLV) for good measure and you have some thrilling games.

Provo high school just had its string of seven straight undefeated seasons in league play broken a couple of weeks ago. BYU players Kevin Nielsen, Greg Ballif and Devin Durrant all contributed to the long string of victories.

The Beehive state has a long list of people who have had an impact on the national basketball scene. There's Stan Watts of course, and Utah State's LaDell Anderson. Arnie Ferrin, Vern Gardner and Jack Gardner have also helped Utah basketball gain national attention.

Big boost

Utah's basketball tradition is getting a big boost this year. With the NCAA Western Regionals at BYU and the National Championship game in Salt Lake City, thousands of fans from out of state will be coming to Utah next month. They are sure to leave with the thunderous noise of local fans still ringing in their ears. And, we hope, they will see the fans rooting for a team from Provo.

Super bowl loses money

AP — Super Bowl XIII was a bonanza for the players of the winning Pittsburgh Steelers and even the losing Dallas Cowboys, but it was a financial bust for the owners of both teams.

"Our expenses were well into six figures," said Steelers' publicist Joe Gordon. "The league gives you into six figures for expenses, but it's not nearly enough."

Precise figures are the private affair of the Rooney family, the owners of the Super Bowl champions. Gordon said.

"We won't be specific, but we'll tell you we lost plenty. We lost. Any team does," he added.

The Cowboys were a little more specific about their debt, saying their losses were at least $100,000.

"As far as the bottom line of our profit and loss statement, it would have been more favorable if we hadn't entered the playoffs," Cowboys President Tex Schramm said before his team was defeated, 35-31.

The Steelers became the first to have the honor of winning on the field while feeling the sting of losing on the ledger three times.

The financial setbacks this year came despite a record $6 million in television advertising revenue. The money was divided among the league's 28 teams.

How to get the most from the computer between your ears.

As a student, probably your biggest single task is information processing. You spend more time absorbing, analyzing, and memorizing facts than anything else. And most of that information is in the form of printed words.

Think what you could accomplish if you had your own personal computer that could digest all your reading almost as fast as you can turn pages. The time and efficiency you'd gain could make a big change for the better in your life right now.

Of course, you already have such a device — it's called a brain. But you're probably not using even a tenth of its capacity. Because just as a computer is only as good as its programs, your brain is only as powerful as the way you use it. And when it comes to reading, most of us are still stuck with the painfully slow methods we learned in grade school. Methods that are so inefficient that your brain actually gets bored and distracted between words (which is why you probably find it hard to concentrate when you're studying).

Evelyn Wood would like you to spend an hour with us to discover some of the miraculous things your brain can do with the proper training. In a single, free, 1 hour demonstration, you'll find out why most people are such poor readers, and how our new RD2 course can increase your reading speed at least 300%, with better concentration and retention. As part of the bargain, we'll show you some new reading techniques designed to increase your speed immediately, with good comprehension — after just this one free demonstration.

Evelyn Wood RD2 can open the door to big things for you: better grades, more leisure time, and a whole new positive outlook on studying.

And it will only cost you an hour of "computer time" to find out how.

will open your eyes.

Attend a free 1-hour RD2 demonstration this week:

Law students to meet

Women who are interested in careers in law are invited to an informal open house today at 4 p.m. in the Moot Court Room, JRCB.

The open house will feature a panel of women law students. They will discuss their impressions and reflections of law school and offer advice for prospective law students.

The open house immediately follows a 3 p.m. forum address on "The Role of the Lawyer in Medical Practice" by Sarah Stark. Ms. Stark is a practicing attorney from Tucson, Ariz., who is also a registered nurse holding a master's degree and a lecturer in the college of nursing in Tucson.

Also, in conjunction with the BYU Women's Week activities, the Associated Women Law Students (AWLS) will maintain a booth in the Wilkinson Center today through Saturday. They will be offering information regarding women and the study of law, the Law School Admissions Test and applications and requirements to attend the J. Reuben Clark Law School.

The AWLS will sponsor on Feb. 26 a panel of law professors and practicing Salt Lake City attorneys who will discuss the ethical, practical and professional considerations of the attorney-client relationship. A symposium on children's rights will be offered March 7-9 with a number of nationally known law professors in the children's rights field present.

U.S. senators' staffs help to solve problems

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

If you are having trouble dealing with a government agency and have exhausted your resources, there is another place to turn for help — the Provo offices of Utah's U.S. senators.

"We have people come in who are having all different kinds of problems with federal agencies, and we try to help them all," said Paul Walgren, director of Sen. Orrin Hatch's Central Utah office.

The Provo offices of Sen. Jake Garn and Sen. Hatch not only deal with red tape problems, but serve as the citizens' link with Washington, D.C.

"Our main service is to give people who want to communicate with their senator the opportunity to do so," Karen Thorn, director of Sen. Garn's Provo office said. "We can save people the long distance phone call or the letter for those who just don't like to write."

The offices, located in the Federal Building at 88 W. 100 North, Provo, are part of the senators' communication system. The senators also maintain offices in Salt Lake City, Ogden and Cedar City.

Sen. Garn's Provo office is open from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. daily. Mrs. Thorn said, but since it is a one-woman office it may occasionally be necessary for people to call back if she steps out of the office.

Sen. Hatch's office operates on a full-time, daily basis. "We put in more hours than any other government people," Walgren said. "There are many times when we are still here working long after the other government workers have gone home."

Most of the work time is spent helping people deal with HEW, Walgren said.

"We had 286 people come in last year who needed help in dealing with HEW," Walgren said. Most of them were having problems in getting their government support checks, he said.

Additional responsibilities handled by the offices include selecting interns for the senators' Washington, D.C., offices and participating in the selection of candidates for military academy appointments.

Speakers highlight women's conference

The second day of BYU's women's conference will feature a keynote address by Elaine Cannon, LDS Young Women's president, in the ELWC Ballroom at 10 a.m. today.

Lectures, exhibitions and demonstrations will be presented throughout the day, said Susan Paxman, vice president of the ASBYU Women's Office.

Beginning at 8 a.m. in the Varsity Theater, ELWC, the BYU Fitness Team and Phyllis Jacobson, department chairman of women's physical education at BYU, will speak on "Dynamic Fitness Through Aerobics: Your Best Medicine."

The women's basketball team will present an exhibition in the Smith Fieldhouse at 1:30 p.m.

From 2:10 to 4 p.m. in the East Ballroom, ELWC, five speakers, including Maren Mouritsen, assistant dean of Student Life at BYU, will discuss "Why A Career?"

Afternoon speakers

Speakers, including Ida Smith, director of the LDS Women's Research Institute, will discuss "Singlehood: Alone But Alive" also from 2:10 to 4 p.m. in 245-249 ELWC. At the same time, in 394-396 ELWC, Parley Newman, professor of educational psychology at BYU, and Jan Bassist, former counselor in the regional Young Special Interests presidency, will discuss "Women and the Priesthood."

Lorin Wheelwright, professor emeritus of music and dean emeritus of the College of Fine Arts and Communications at BYU, will speak on "Volberg" from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. in 205 JRCB. At the same time, in 321 ELWC, Tana Johnson, detective with BYU Security/Police, will discuss "Self Protection."

Dance demonstration

A dance demonstration given by the BYU dance department and Dee Winterton will take place in the Pardoe Drama Theater, HFAC, from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

"Is the Ideal Real?" will be discussed by Stephen Covey, author and associate professor of organizational behavior at BYU, and by his wife, Sandra Covey, writer and Education Week lecturer, at 7:30 p.m. in the Auditorium, JSB.

The conference is free of charge, and both men and women are invited to attend. Registration will continue from 8 to 10 a.m. today in the Step-down Lounge, ELWC. For further information and complete schedules contact the ASBYU Women's Office, 432 ELWC, ext. 3901.

Provo raps 'false report' on federal flood insurance

The Salt Lake Tribune report that Provo may be suspended from a federal flood insurance program unless it complies with federal regulations by Feb. 15, is false, said Al Mickelsen, city zoning administrator.

The inaccurate information, which ran in the Tribune on Wednesday, was obtained from an outdated Washington, D.C., list and the Tribune failed to verify the information with another source, said Leland Gamette, administrative assistant to the city commission.

The Tribune reported that Provo was the only Utah community on a list with those from 19 other states threatened with suspension from the program.

The city has already enacted a program that is in compliance with the federal guidelines, Mickelsen said.

"It's already a law right now."

The city commission adopted a flood plan ordinance several weeks ago which became effective Feb. 1, according to Gamette.

The ordinance would outline flood problem areas and control development in these areas, Mickelsen said.

After the ordinance was adopted, a copy of the ordinance was submitted to the regional HUD office in Denver and the office acknowledged the receipt of it, he said.

A Jan. 25 letter to Mickelsen from Douglas Gore, assistant director for community assistance in the Denver office, states, "Our office reviewed the ordinance and determined that it fulfills the minimum requirements for participation in the Regular Phase of the National Flood Insurance Program."

Did you say 'hug' or 'mug'?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Christopher Harris cuddles complete strangers to gauge their hugging attitudes.

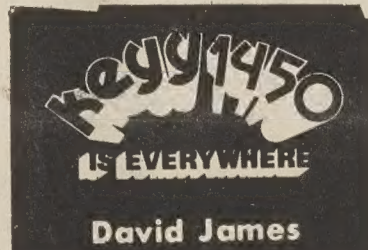

Harris snagged female pedestrians for more than an hour Monday on the corner of Hollywood and Vine, collecting data for a nursery company that he said is thinking about encouraging its clerks to hug anyone who buys a plant.

Harris' approach drew a wide range of reactions. Some women said no, some scurried away. But more than half of the women were willing.

"Did you say 'hug' or 'mug'?" asked 29-year-old Nancy Nielsen before submitting.

"Everyone is my friend," said 76-year-old Sarah Schwartz, another of the hugged. "I like people."

Security officer aces police academy class

By JOSEPH WALKER
Universe Staff Writer

Most people try to avoid tense, pressure-packed situations, but Cpl. Dan Evans, BYU Security/Police, seems to thrive on them.

Evans handles pressure so well, in fact, he has graduated as valedictorian of the Utah Police Academy.

The academy, based in Salt Lake City, is a competitive, performance-oriented course intended to train young officers in police and emergency skills. The officers receive two months of training in all facets of police work including 40 hours of training in traffic accidents, first aid, and crime scene procedures; 30 hours of work in criminal law; 20 hours of psychology training, and several hours in combat exercises.

Police agencies from across the state send their new officers to the academy for training and development. The officers are graded in each area, and any officer receiving a grade of less than 80 percent is eliminated. Evans, representing the BYU Security/Police, averaged 95 percent on all of his tests and graduated first in his class of 26.

Security Chief Robert Kelshaw said Evans' achievement "demonstrates a special type of talent that we have working in our department. It makes my job easier to know that we have this caliber of employees."

The professionalism of the BYU Security/Police is important to Evans, as it is to most Security officers. "We're proud of the department here. It's a good environment with great people, good facilities and equipment, and a good salary. Working with BYU Security is not a stepping stone to a 'real' police department — it is a real police department," Evans said.

As a corporal, Evans is responsible for the swing shift — late night until early morning. That is all right with the Fremont, Calif., native, because "that's when everything goes down. I'm in the business because it's varied, it's exciting. You can call it an ego thing if you like, but I guess most of us just like to be the guys on the spot."

"Being at the Lord's university makes us view things differently. There is a lot of pressure on us to not only handle things professionally, but to handle things from a gospel framework," Evans said.

"At BYU, we have to avoid hardness," said Evans. "We realize we are always walking into people's problems. We try to handle everything, from accident reports to larceny, from a personal, caring point of view."

According to Michael Rawson, Evans' elders quorum president, "It's great to be able to work with people like Dan. He's so dependable and is always the first one to lend a hand when we need it."

As for the academy valedictorian, Evans said, "Unless something earthshaking happens, I feel we have a good, secure environment here. I want to do all I can to help keep it that way."

Applications being taken for work at Aspen Grove

If you enjoy hiking, swimming, jogging and fishing, you might consider working at the Aspen Grove Family Camp this summer.

BYU students interested in work should apply now at the BYU Alumni Association, said Ken Taylor, camp manager.

There are about 35 jobs available at the mountain camp in all areas of recreation including family camping activities, sports, games skills and contests. Other jobs include maintenance and dining room work.

The summer job will last from the first of June to the end of August and employees are given room and board in addition to a salary. Sunday church meetings are conducted by the Aspen Grove Branch and college credit may be obtained for some positions at the camp.

Applications should be completed by March 1 and selections will be made within two weeks.

children killed in bus-train crash

CHICAGO (AP) — A bus returning kindergarten children to their homes after morning classes collided with a railroad locomotive Wednesday and was dragged 60 feet down the tracks. Authorities said two youngsters were killed and 17 injured, two of them critically.

Police said the bus had stopped and started through the intersection just after a freight train passed. A locomotive going the opposite direction then collided with the bus.

"We ran out and saw that this engine, which wasn't pulling any cars, had carried the bus down the tracks about 60 feet or so," said Beatrice Taylor, a railroad worker at the South Shore Iron Works, who saw the crash from her office.

She said there are no gates at the crossing on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad line.

All the children were 5 or 6 years old, hospital attendants said. Including the driver, there were 20 persons in the bus, which has a seating capacity of about 60.

turquoise belt lost; value placed at $400

A silver and turquoise "Conjo" belt, valued at $400, was taken from a women's restroom in the Wilkinson Center.

According to BYU Security/Police detective Malin Shepherd, the owner of the belt had used the second floor restroom to change into a costume for a rehearsal of the Inter-Tribal Choir. She placed the belt in a white sack and left it on a couch in the restroom, underneath her coat.

When she returned an hour later, the sack was in another location in the restroom. The belt was gone, and other articles in the sack were left untouched. Other members of the choir had left coats and sacks on the couch, but no other property was disturbed. The victim indicated that it was "as though someone had taken the belt knew what they were going after."

The belt has a black background and is about five inches wide. The buckle is silver, as are the alternating round and hourglass-shaped symbols that go around the belt. There are large turquoise stones in the buckle as well as in the round symbols.

"Everyone enjoys tap dancing," Miss Nelson says, "it's a real audience pleaser."

Tap dancing still alive with top hat and cane

By DIANNA GREER
Universe Staff Writer

Tambourines jingle and top hats tip as Colleen Nelson and 21 other dancers tippity tap across the stage in a rag time show boat medley during the production of "World of Dance."

"Everyone really enjoys tap dancing," Miss Nelson says, "it's a real audience pleaser."

Miss Nelson, a dance major from Calgary, Alberta, Canada, has been involved in almost every type of dance, but says tap has always been her favorite. Miss Nelson is president of the BYU Tap Dance Club.

"Tap isn't just the cane and hat bit it once was," she says, "its image has changed a lot. Now it's more of a modern jazz type dance."

"With tap you really have to concentrate because there's a lot to worry about. Your feet, arms and facial expression must all be clear and crisp. You really have to be on the ball."

"All the schools would meet together in Edmonton for one week to compete. Our lines received gold medals three different years."

Miss Nelson says she really got into dance when she came to BYU. "I've done just about every type of dancing there is here at the 'Y,' 'cause I'm not sure which direction to take." In addition to tap, she has been involved with social, ballroom, folk, modern, jazz and ballet.

All areas of dance

"I love all areas of dance, and am having a hard time deciding," she says. "When I finally do decide for sure, I'll put all of myself into that one field and really go for it."

Aside from her involvement with the tap dance club, Miss Nelson belongs to the Folk Dance and Gold Ballroom Dance teams.

Although the Tap Club existed before, it never really got off its feet.

"Colleen intends to whip it back into shape," says BYU dance teacher Cathy Black. When Miss Nelson set up a booth about the club in the Step Down Lounge, ELWC, 135 students signed up for it.

"A lot of people like to tap dance, but just don't have the time to take a class," says the petite blonde. "This will give them the chance to do something."

Tap Club for fun

The objective of the tap club, is for interested students to get together and have fun learning and observing each other's skills, Colleen said.

"Oldies" provide alternative to Friday night television

For all those compulsive watchers of old movies who stay up till two or three in the morning to catch the very best on TV, an alternative is soon to be in the offing.

The Alhambra Theater in Pleasant Grove has begun a month-long series of these "oldies" which they call "Great Heroes of the Silver Screen."

For four weeks, beginning Feb. 7, two movies will be shown each night featuring various film artists from "way back when."

Duke Major, owner of the Alhambra Theater, described the unique image that movie stars during the 1930s and 1940s possessed.

"It wasn't that they were better actors or anything like that. But they each had a style and a personal magnetism that is rarely found in today's 'super stars.' Of course, much of this was fabricated by the movie studios, but there was also something extra — something that has been lost."

"Take for example Clark Gable. He never was a great actor, but no one can dispute the power he held over his audiences. Once he cut undershirt sales in half by appearing without one in a movie. No one can do that today."

Gable will start the lineup of actors featured in the Alhambra Theater film festival with "San Francisco" and "The Misfits," which also stars Marilyn Monroe.

Gable's double feature will run during the week Feb. 7-13, excluding Saturday.

Beginning Feb. 14, two Errol Flynn movies will be spotlighted, "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" and "The Adventures of Robin Hood." They will run until Tuesday, Feb. 20.

Gary Cooper will be featured during the week Feb. 21-27, in "Sergeant York," accompanied by "Yankee Doodle Dandy," starring James Cagney.

Show times for the double features will be at 7:15 and 9:00 every night except Sunday. Tickets are $1.75 for students, and $2.00 general admission. Tuesdays and Thursdays are "two-for-one" nights, when two students can be admitted for the $1.75 price.

The Alhambra Theater is located at 20 S. Main in Pleasant Grove.

Battlestar Galactica

Glen Larson — TV's most imaginative mind

Editor's note: Recently The Daily Universe dispatched Steve Preston to interview TV producer Glen Larson, a member of the LDS Church, who produced the TV programs "It Takes a Thief," "Quincy," "McCloud" and "The Hardy Boys." Currently, Larson is the writer and producer for ABC's "Battlestar Galactica." The following is the first of a two-part series on Larson.

By STEVE PRESTON

Glen Larson puts down the phone after yet another of the many calls which punctuate the day in his well-appointed office, and starts to speak. Settling into the interview, Larson starts to answer a question when into his office walks singer Tony Orlando, Orlando's eight year old son, and an aide. Orlando has just returned from the sound stages which contain the sets for Battlestar Galactica.

Orlando is as entranced with the physical manifestation of Glen Larson's imagination as is his son, who comments, "who needs Disneyland?" Orlando tells Larson that he has the enviable chance to live out all his childhood fantasies through his television shows. Larson, with a smile indicating "you ain't seen nothing yet," then proceeds to put a video clip into his video tape recorder.

The entire office staff gathers to view a sneak preview of Larson's coming movie, "Buck Rogers," which opens March 30 nationally. The special effects are dazzling, and the impromptu audience shows approval with spontaneous applause. Larson smiles appreciatively. Clearly he is a man who enjoys his work.

Larson, who at 41 is the most prolific producer at Universal studios, which is turning the nation's biggest supplier of TV entertainment, has been deeply interested in broadcasting since the day he was a kid growing up in Long Beach. He was given a ticket to "Smiling Ed" and "McConnell's Buster Brown Gang" as a reward for good behavior.

"I was just in awe of those people standing in front of microphones and talking to the whole country and I felt I wanted to be like them," he says. "I started putting on radio shows in my garage with play microphones. I'd even go down to the networks and get scripts and put out of the back of the building when they threw them out and as 11- and 12-year-old kids we would put on those shows."

Larson's first big break, however, came in 1964 when he was hired by NBC as a page at NBC, a musical group which he belonged to — the Four Preps — was given a chance to record for Capitol Records. The group was together for more than 10 years and Larson looks back fondly on the time as a real educational experience.

"We got to see the entire world and criss-cross this country through almost every inch of it," said Larson. "Going to the 'Y' was like an annual event for us with our concerts. As a matter of fact I remember the Lettermen coming up to us backstage one night and saying, 'Golly, we sure wish we could record.'"

While traveling with the Four Preps, Larson carried along his typewriter. He wrote three of the songs the group made into Gold Records for Capitol ("Twenty-Six Miles (Santa Catalina)," "Big Man" and "Down by the Station").

But Larson was writing other things besides hit songs. He had taken some courses in writing in college and soon was selling scripts to established TV shows.

"I started selling a story or two to The Fugitive and to Twelve O'Clock High, and then a couple of concepts to Universal," said Larson. "But they hired other writers to go to work on them. Then one day they said if I wanted to try to write for one of our regular series, they would introduce me to a few of the producers on the lot."

One of the producers Larson met was Gene L. Coons, formerly a producer for "Star Trek." Coons was at Universal working on a new series called It Takes a Thief starring Robert Wagner. Thief was a mid-season show and was short on story ideas. Larson decided to fill the need for scripts.

"I told him (Coons) an idea I had for a script and he said 'I don't have the authority to buy that or to commission you, but if the script were on my desk Monday morning and it were as good as it sounds I would buy it.' Anyway, I went home that weekend and wrote it and they made me the story editor based on that script. Within a couple of months I was the producer."

It was the beginning of a successful career as a television producer. In addition to producing It Takes a Thief, Larson has created and produced such popular series as Sword of Justice, Battlestar Galactica, Alias Smith and Jones and Switch.

Larson also produced McCloud over its long run and has been executive producer for Quincy and The Hardy Boys. The Operation Prime Time extravaganza Evening in Byzantium was also a Glen Larson production.

Besides writing scripts for his shows, Larson has written the theme music for Quincy and Switch and co-authored the Battlestar Galactica theme.

Though Larson wears many hats, he says his main role is that of a producer. He adds that in television the producer is the key individual, whereas in motion pictures the director is often the driving force.

"The producer is the person who comes up with the story idea, hires the writers, hires the director, supervises the post production, oversees the music, and in general brings it all together. He's the boss." Yet, notes Larson: "Titles are only as strong as the individual wearing the title."

Larson is direct when asked which of his many talents has made him successful as a producer. "Writing is the cornerstone of my career. The ability to jump in and do something with that script when it doesn't work is the key to producing television, as far as I am concerned."

Larson says that while ideas for scripts occasionally just pop into his head, he finds that it generally requires concentration and self discipline to come up with workable ideas. Another important factor in getting new ideas is constantly sampling different sources of information. "I'm one of those creatures who samples a lot of things at the same time," said Larson. "I mean, I'll be watching television, while listening to a ball game on the radio while working on a script."

Larson works hard at his job, often leaving his office at 10 p.m. with a stack of scripts under his arm for further work at home. His chauffeured Cadillac limousine contains a Betamax and TV screen for reviewing the day's work. Yet he has few complaints. "I have a great love for what I do," said Larson. "I consider it an honor to drive in the front gate at the studio. It's fun. I think it's wonderful when you can have a career field which is truly fun."

In part two of the series on Glen Larson, he talks about how his background in the LDS Church affects the content of "Battlestar Galactica." Larson also talks about the TV shows he has enjoyed producing most and why.

Glen A. Larson, producer of Battlestar Galactica, poses with Fred Astaire, who recently starred in an episode of the popular series. Larson, who is LDS, says his start in show business came as a singer in the musical group, The Four Preps.

Battlestar Galactica has consistently had high ratings since its first episode. Glen Larson, who is producer of the series, says, "I have a great love for what I do ... It's fun. I think it's truly wonderful when you can have a career field which is truly fun."

Take ten today

"Blue Grass Remedy," a local blue grass band, will perform Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Memorial Lounge, ELWC, as a part of the "Take Ten Concert Series," according to ASBYU Culture Vice-President Dave Litster. The band, which has been playing weekends at Jimba's Ice Cream Parlor, will perform free of charge, and all students are invited to attend.

City officials discuss disco

Owners of the Star Palace discotheque were scheduled to meet with 70 city officials this morning to discuss the installation of a sprinkler system in the building.

The fire marshal, building inspectors, zoning staff members and city commission will be meeting with Brent Ecks, part owner and manager of Star Palace. During the building's remodeling, a visit by inspection officials revealed the need for a sprinkler system in the building. The owners were given 90 days from the meeting date to install the system. The 90 days expired Jan. 13. "We are looking for a commitment on the installation of a sprinkler system," said David Gardner, zoning administrator. "We are expecting some resolution to come out of the meeting. The worst that could happen is the closing of the Star Palace; definitely something else will be worked out." The city officials' concern is over the damage to life that could occur if a fire broke out in the Star Palace, Gardner said.

A good year

Provo fire loss low

By KIM HANSEN
 Universe Staff Writer

Last year approximately $31.5 million worth of Provo property was in danger of going up in smoke. However, thanks to the Provo City Fire Department, only $328,000 of that amount was lost by fire.

The fire department published its 1978 annual report last week and, according to Chief Stan Brown, "It was generally a good year."

Brown said one of the most pleasing things of the year was the low per capita fire loss. Provo's loss per citizen was $4.96. National Fire Protection Association statistics show the national per capita fire loss for 1978 as $18.60.

The $328,000 of property loss last year in Provo represents the third highest total in the past 10 years. "Last year's loss may seem like a great deal at first glance, but the inflation factor means quite a bit," Brown said. "In other words, when we compute the dollar loss of a fire, we look at replacement cost and not actual worth."

The 1972 fire loss was more than a half million dollars; in 1976 a total of $414,000 worth of property burned.

The busiest month of last year was July when the fire department responded to 104 calls. Brown said many of those calls were grass and trash fires, which was the single most common type of fire fought during the year. August, however, was the month in which the greatest amount of dollar loss was recorded, more than $108,000.

The slowest month was February, with only 40 calls to fires resulting in a property loss of almost $6,000. The fire departments averaged 66 calls per month in 1978.

The great majority of building fires occurred in homes. During the past year there were 60 fires in residential dwellings and 36 fires in apartments, the report said.

Provo's single most damaging fire of last year occurred in August when a four unit apartment under construction was destroyed. The cause of the fire was arson and it resulted in a loss of $60,000. Arson was also the cause of seven other fires in 1978.

Excluding automobile fires, the most common cause of Provo fires in 1978 was children playing with matches. There were 38 fires ignited by children. Other major causes of fires included trash and rubbish fires and pans left burning on a stove or in an oven.

Provo firefighters responded to two major fires outside of the city, the report said. They were involved in the blaze which destroyed the River Bend Lounge and Cafe in Provo Canyon in January. They also responded to an arson-caused automobile fire south of Provo in April.

The River Bend Lounge fire was the most devastating fire of the year. In that fire, more than $100,000 worth of property was lost.

City to ask for federal funds despite citizens' objections

By DEANA LLOYD
 Universe Staff Writer

Despite objections raised about use of federal funds, Provo will be probably be applying for a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

"I am pretty sure the city will make application for the grant," said Ronald Madsen, program director for the CDBG. "We have been invited to apply for the funds; if we don't apply, the funds will be given to someone else."

Citizens raised objections to the use of federal moneys on local projects during Tuesday night's commission meeting. C. Bruce Jensen, chairman of the CDBG select committee, submitted a letter to the committee expressing his opposition to the funds earlier this week. Other committee members are in favor of the program.

"I feel the appropriate avenue would be for those opposed to the grant program to express their concern to their congressional delegation," said Stephen Brower, select committee member and North Area Council representative. "I myself prefer not to encourage federal bureaucracy, but I feel the spirit of the CDBG program to invest in depressed areas is positive."

Brower went on to question whether the city would take the initiative to improve disadvantaged or low income areas if the CDBG program didn't exist. "It doesn't seem that any problems would be solved by sending the money back," Brower said.

Mrs. Ora Peterson, select committee member and South Area Council representative, expressed the same concerns. "Somebody else would get the money if we don't use it," Mrs. Peterson said.

"Many of the projects are worthwhile to the community," she said. "My main objection is how much money is spent on studies instead of on the actual projects."

Pay hospital bill and computer won't tell

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The billing computer used by St. Clair Hospital is sending out chummy past-due notices pleading with patients to pay up so that a human won't "get upset" with it.

The letter, which a patient receives as a second notice, reads:

"Hello there. I'm the hospital computer. As yet, no one knows that your account is two months past due. Why not mail your payment today, because if I have not processed a payment from you within 10 days, I must tell a human who will get upset with me."

The novel approach to bill collection has aggravated some people and delighted others and many have written back to the machine.

Ambassador to speak at Y

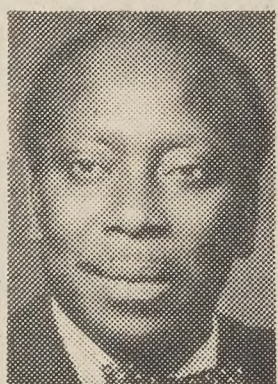

The first ambassador from an African state to visit BYU will speak at 10 a.m. Feb. 15 in the Moot Court Room, JRCB.

Dr. Alex Quaison-Sackey, a lecturer, economist and Ambassador of the African State of Ghana in the U.S., received his education in Ghana, London and France. He has received four honorary doctorate degrees from colleges in the U.S.

The topic of his lecture will be "Marriage and The Law — The Ghanaian Experience." The lecture is sponsored by the Center for International and Area Studies in cooperation with the J. Reuben Clark Law School and Graduate School of Management.

Dr. Spencer J. Palmer, director of the Center of International and Area Studies, said the visit from the African ambassador "is consistent with the growing concern for international and increased awareness of nations, kindreds, tongues, and peoples throughout the world."

While at the university, BYU President Dallin H. Oaks will host a dinner for Ambassador Quaison-Sackey and his counselor of information, Ernest Teteh. It is also expected that the visitors will be received at LDS Church headquarters by church officials.

Professor a believer

Hypnosis for better grades?

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A white-haired professor who has taught for 30 years faced his superiors Wednesday as they considered firing him for hypnotizing students, many of whom showed up to applaud him.

The hearing to determine Arlie Lincks' fate will continue into next week, spokesmen for the five-member Board of Trustees said after the day's testimony. The hearing was punctuated by applause for the engineering teacher, who claims he uses hypnosis to improve students' grades.

More than 100 people attended the hearing at Manatee Junior College in this quiet Gulf Coast city, and the students had to be quiet at times by presiding trustee John Blue.

"There aren't enough teachers here who really care," said Mike Austin, 24, of Bradenton. "That's why I'm here today — because he cared."

Once hypnotized, he said, "they retain what they study and it alleviates fear of the professor, of the subject matter, of exams."

One believer is Ellen Richelieu, now a second-grade teacher at Oneco Elementary School near Bradenton.

"I was on academic suspension at the college," she said. "Professor Lincks got to the source of the problem through hypnosis and helped me to relax before the tests. I could close my eyes and remember everything I had studied. Before then, everything went blank."

Miss Richelieu said Lincks hypnotized her in his campus office.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

Dutch Auction

So what is a Dutch Auction? How does it work? The prices on the sale items in the auction reduce every day for 12 days, which is the duration of the auction.

The thing that makes this sale so interesting is that during the early days of the auction all the merchandise is still in the store. You don't have to brave the crowds on opening day or find that by afternoon all the good merchandise is gone.

Bids

If you wish, you can make a deposit towards an item on the sale for a later day when the price is lower. If you make a bid on any item for day 11, for example, then if the item does not sell on any prior day, no one else can buy it at the day 11 price. However, all items are subject to prior sale, so if you bid on day 11 and the item is sold on day 9 your deposit is refunded.

It is not necessary to bid to buy on the Dutch Auction. All items are available for immediate sale at the price corresponding to the day of the sale.

This year's Dutch Auction begins Wednesday, Feb. 7, and runs 12 business days until Tuesday, Feb. 20. The lowest prices on the auction are, of course, the last day. The best selection is during the early part. Most items don't sell before day seven. The prices reduce faster for the first six days.

Some auction items will be available in both Provo and Orem stores, some only in one store or the other. If items are available only in one store it is so indicated in the ad.
